Advantages

- periodical coupon payments
- higher interest payments in comparison to non-subordinated bonds compensate higher credit risk due to subordination
- redemption of 100% in terms of face value (subject to the default risk of the issuer), if there is no statutory loss participation obligation
- In case of an early redemption due to legal and/or fiscal changes investors receive a payment of 100% in terms of face value.

Risks you should be aware of

- Investors are subject to the risk of the insolvency and thus default of the issuer and may incur capital losses of up to 100%.
- In the event of the liquidation or insolvency of the issuer, investors, as subordinate creditors, are particularly subject to the risk that claims will only be fulfilled once all other claims by non-subordinate creditors have been fully satisfied.
- The subordinate status vis-à-vis non-subordinate creditors increases the default risk.

- The recapitalisation or the winding-up of credit institutions may involve the reduction or write-off of the nominal value and the conversion into equity. In this case the investors of subordinate bonds may lose their right to redemption and, in case of conversion into equity, may be expropriated.
- The regulatory framework and supervisory steps may have significant effect on investor rights and may negatively affect the market value of subordinate bonds even before the occurrence of economic insolvency or winding-up.
- Investors bear the risk of interest rate increases, which would trigger a fall in the market price of the bond
- The bond price is subject to fluctuations during the life of the bond, which may result in losses.
- The redemption of 100% (in terms of face value) by Erste Group Bank AG only applies to the end of maturity.
